

The government has paid Lockheed Martin, the world's second biggest arms company £150 million of public money to help run the census.

We can't let this go unnoticed!

"When the government's using the census to support a company which profits from war, you can count me out!"

Lizzy Brooks -23

Count meOUT
action against the 2011 census

www.countmeout.me.uk

Count me out

action against the 2011 census

One of the world's largest arms companies is helping to run this year's census...

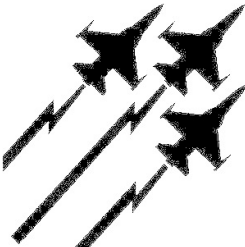

In 2008, the government awarded Lockheed Martin UK a £150 million contract to help run the data processing for the 2011 census.

Lockheed Martin, are known for producing cluster munitions, Britain's Trident nuclear weapons and have also sold weapons to Bahrain, who are currently undergoing a wave of protest against its repressive regime.

Each time Lockheed Martin helps to run a census, the company gains a veneer of credibility and legitimacy that is entirely contradictory to the destructive nature of the arms trade.

Our government shouldn't be paying an arms company, which fuels conflict and war, huge amounts of money to help run the census.

From boycotts to census parties to writing to the Office of National Statistics and MPs, people and groups across the UK will be taking action against the 2011 census.

Join us...

www.countmeout.me.uk

info@countmeout.me.uk

Facebook: count me out

Twitter: @countme_out